

iJRASET

International Journal For Research in Applied Science and Engineering Technology

INTERNATIONAL JOURNAL FOR RESEARCH

IN APPLIED SCIENCE & ENGINEERING TECHNOLOGY

Volume: 14 Issue: VIII Month of publication: August 2026

DOI: <https://doi.org/10.22214/ijraset.2026.84731>

www.ijraset.com

Call: ☎ 08813907089

E-mail ID: ijraset@gmail.com

AI-Powered Chatbots for Customer Service in Banking

Prithvi Siva Sankar Shunmuga Sundaram¹, Sureshkumar Somayajula², Dr. R. Venugopal³

¹Staff Software Engineer ,Cloudera,Bengaluru ,Karnataka ,India,560034

²Senior Solution Architect, Department of IT,Long View Systems ,Edmonton , Alberta, Canada

³Assistant Professor, Department of Mathematics,United College of Arts and Science

Abstract: Artificial Intelligence (AI)-powered chatbots have become an integral component of digital transformation in the banking sector. These intelligent conversational agents utilize technologies such as Natural Language Processing (NLP), Machine Learning (ML), and Generative AI to provide efficient, personalized, and round-the-clock customer support. The increasing demand for instant banking services has encouraged financial institutions to deploy chatbots for handling customer inquiries, transaction assistance, financial guidance, and complaint resolution. This study examines the role of AI-powered chatbots in enhancing customer service within banking institutions by reviewing existing literature and proposing a conceptual framework for chatbot adoption. The study identifies key benefits such as improved operational efficiency, reduced service costs, enhanced customer satisfaction, and greater accessibility. Simultaneously, it highlights challenges associated with privacy, trust, cybersecurity, and ethical considerations. The findings suggest that AI chatbots significantly contribute to customer engagement and service innovation while emphasizing the necessity of integrating human support for complex banking interactions.

Keywords: Artificial Intelligence, Chatbots, Banking Services, Customer Satisfaction, Natural Language Processing, Digital Banking, Financial Technology, Customer Experience.

I. INTRODUCTION

The banking industry has witnessed substantial technological advancements over the past decade, with Artificial Intelligence emerging as a transformative force in customer service delivery. Modern banking customers expect immediate, personalized, and seamless interactions through digital channels. Consequently, financial institutions have increasingly adopted AI-powered chatbots to meet these evolving expectations. Chatbots are intelligent software applications capable of simulating human conversations through text or voice interfaces. By leveraging Natural Language Processing and Machine Learning techniques, these systems can understand customer queries, provide relevant responses, and continuously improve their performance through learning mechanisms. AI chatbots have been successfully implemented across various banking functions, including balance inquiries, transaction tracking, loan assistance, account management, fraud notifications, and financial advisory services. Their ability to provide twenty-four-hour support while minimizing operational expenses has made them valuable assets in customer relationship management. However, the implementation of chatbot technologies also raises concerns regarding customer trust, data privacy, regulatory compliance, and the limitations of automated decision-making.

II. LITERATURE REVIEW

Previous studies have extensively explored the application of AI chatbots in customer service and banking environments. Caldarini et al. (2022) observed that AI chatbots significantly enhance customer interactions through advanced Natural Language Processing techniques and contextual understanding. The authors emphasized that conversational AI systems improve response efficiency and reduce service delays, although they still face limitations in interpreting complex human emotions and intentions.

Mashaabi et al. (2022) highlighted the importance of NLP-based customer service systems in increasing the accuracy and effectiveness of automated responses. Their findings revealed that intelligent conversational agents considerably improve service quality and customer engagement in digital environments. Similarly, Khosravi et al. (2023) conducted a systematic review and reported a rapid growth in chatbot research, particularly with the emergence of Generative AI technologies that have expanded the capabilities of conversational systems.

Kanaparthi (2024) investigated AI-driven personalization in financial services and concluded that personalized chatbot interactions positively influence customer trust and satisfaction.

Nevertheless, concerns regarding data security and privacy continue to affect customer acceptance of AI technologies in banking applications. Eustaquio-Jiménez et al. (2024) further emphasized that banking chatbots significantly improve operational efficiency by automating routine customer inquiries and reducing service costs.

Graham et al. (2025) argued that chatbots are revolutionizing customer service in banking by enabling continuous support and personalized experiences. Their study indicated that customers appreciate the convenience and accessibility offered by AI systems, although human intervention remains essential for handling complex financial matters. Likewise, Karri et al. (2025) found that AI chatbots contribute to improved customer engagement and organizational productivity by reducing employee workload and enhancing service delivery mechanisms.

III. CONTRIBUTION OF THE STUDY

The present study contributes to the existing body of knowledge by providing a comprehensive understanding of AI-powered chatbot applications in banking customer service. Unlike previous studies that primarily focus on technological aspects, this research integrates customer satisfaction, trust, security concerns, and service efficiency into a unified framework. The study also highlights the significance of hybrid service models that combine AI capabilities with human expertise. Furthermore, it identifies research gaps concerning ethical issues, privacy concerns, and the future integration of Generative AI in banking environments. The proposed framework may assist banking institutions, researchers, and policymakers in developing effective strategies for implementing AI-driven customer service systems.

IV. PROPOSED RESEARCH FRAMEWORK

The proposed study suggests that the effectiveness of AI-powered chatbots in banking depends on several technological and customer-related factors. Independent variables such as AI capabilities, personalization features, response accuracy, service availability, and security mechanisms directly influence customer perceptions. These factors affect mediating variables including customer trust, perceived usefulness, and overall customer experience, which subsequently determine customer satisfaction, loyalty, and adoption intentions. Moreover, demographic factors such as age, digital literacy, and privacy concerns may moderate the relationship between chatbot performance and customer acceptance. The study proposes adopting a quantitative research methodology involving primary data collection from banking customers using structured questionnaires. Statistical tools such as descriptive analysis, correlation, regression analysis, and Structural Equation Modeling may be employed to validate the proposed framework and examine the relationships among the study variables.

V. DISCUSSION

The increasing adoption of AI-powered chatbots demonstrates their significant impact on customer service transformation within the banking sector. AI technologies have enabled banks to provide instant responses, personalized recommendations, and continuous support, thereby improving overall customer experiences. Studies indicate that customers appreciate the convenience and efficiency offered by chatbots, particularly for routine banking transactions and information inquiries (Graham et al., 2025).

Figure 1.1: AI Chatbot in Banking: Faster Queries, Happier Customers

Despite these advantages, several challenges remain. Customers often express concerns regarding data privacy, transparency, and the reliability of AI-generated responses. Trust becomes a critical determinant of chatbot acceptance, particularly when sensitive financial information is involved. Furthermore, AI systems may encounter difficulties in handling complex queries requiring emotional intelligence, critical thinking, and contextual judgment. Consequently, many researchers advocate for hybrid customer service models where chatbots handle routine interactions while human representatives manage sophisticated financial issues (Karri et al., 2025).

Table 1: Proposed Hypotheses

Hypothesis Code	Statement
H1	AI capability positively influences customer trust.
H2	Personalization positively affects customer satisfaction.
H3	Customer trust positively influences adoption intention.
H4	Perceived usefulness positively affects customer loyalty.
H5	Privacy concerns negatively moderate chatbot adoption.

Another important concern involves cybersecurity risks and ethical implications associated with AI deployment in banking. Financial institutions must establish robust security frameworks, comply with regulatory standards, and ensure transparency in algorithmic decision-making processes. The successful implementation of AI-powered customer service systems therefore requires balancing technological innovation with customer trust and ethical responsibility.

The findings of this study indicate that AI-powered chatbots have become a significant technological innovation in the banking sector, fundamentally transforming customer service delivery mechanisms. The increasing adoption of digital banking services has created a demand for immediate, personalized, and efficient customer support systems. AI chatbots effectively address these requirements by providing instant responses, reducing waiting times, and enabling continuous customer engagement. Their ability to process large volumes of customer interactions simultaneously makes them valuable tools for improving service efficiency and reducing operational burdens on banking institutions. One of the major advantages identified in this study is the enhancement of customer experience through personalized interactions. Modern chatbots employ Machine Learning algorithms and Natural Language Processing techniques to analyze customer behavior, transaction patterns, and preferences, thereby providing customized recommendations and services. Personalized banking experiences improve customer satisfaction and foster long-term relationships between customers and financial institutions. Previous studies have reported that personalized AI interactions significantly increase customers' perceived usefulness and trust toward digital banking platforms (Kanaparthi, 2024). Another important observation is the considerable reduction in operational costs achieved through chatbot implementation. Banking institutions traditionally allocate substantial resources to customer support centers, employee training, and infrastructure management. AI chatbots automate repetitive tasks such as account inquiries, transaction tracking, and frequently asked questions, thereby reducing the dependency on human customer service representatives. This automation not only decreases operational expenditures but also enables employees to focus on more complex and value-added activities. Consequently, organizations experience improvements in both productivity and service quality (Karri et al., 2025).

The study further reveals that AI-powered chatbots contribute significantly to customer accessibility and financial inclusion. Customers residing in remote areas or those with limited access to physical banking facilities can utilize chatbot services through mobile applications and online platforms. The availability of multilingual conversational interfaces further enhances accessibility by enabling customers from diverse linguistic backgrounds to interact effectively with banking systems. Therefore, AI chatbots have the potential to bridge the gap between traditional banking services and underserved populations. Despite these advantages, several challenges continue to influence the effectiveness of chatbot technologies. One of the most critical concerns relates to data privacy and security. Banking transactions involve highly sensitive financial information, and customers often hesitate to share such information with automated systems due to fears of cyberattacks, identity theft, and unauthorized data usage. The increasing frequency of cybersecurity incidents emphasizes the necessity for robust encryption mechanisms, secure authentication procedures, and strict regulatory compliance.

Banking institutions must therefore establish transparent data governance policies to enhance customer confidence in AI-driven services.

Another challenge identified in this study is the limited emotional intelligence of existing chatbot systems. Although advancements in Generative AI have significantly improved conversational capabilities, chatbots still struggle to understand human emotions, contextual nuances, and complex financial concerns. Customers facing financial stress, fraud-related issues, or grievance situations often prefer human interaction due to the empathetic support provided by human representatives. Consequently, complete automation of banking customer service may not be feasible in the immediate future. A hybrid service model combining AI efficiency with human emotional intelligence appears to be the most practical approach. Trust also emerges as a critical determinant of chatbot adoption. Customers are more likely to utilize AI services when they perceive the systems as reliable, secure, and transparent. Factors such as response accuracy, consistency, and explainability significantly influence trust formation. If chatbots provide incorrect information or fail to resolve customer concerns effectively, customer confidence may decline, leading to reduced adoption intentions. Therefore, banks should continuously monitor chatbot performance and incorporate explainable AI mechanisms that enable customers to understand how automated decisions and recommendations are generated.

Furthermore, demographic factors such as age, educational background, and digital literacy significantly influence customer acceptance of AI-powered banking services. Younger customers and technologically proficient individuals generally exhibit higher levels of acceptance toward chatbot technologies due to their familiarity with digital environments. Conversely, elderly customers may demonstrate resistance due to concerns regarding technological complexity, privacy issues, and reduced trust in automated systems. This finding suggests that banks should design user-friendly interfaces and provide digital literacy initiatives to encourage broader adoption across different customer segments. The study also highlights the emerging role of Generative AI and Large Language Models in redefining chatbot capabilities. Advanced conversational AI systems can engage in more natural interactions, provide contextual responses, and support complex financial advisory functions. However, the deployment of such technologies introduces new challenges related to ethical considerations, algorithmic bias, misinformation, and accountability. Regulatory authorities and banking institutions must therefore collaborate to establish comprehensive AI governance frameworks that ensure responsible and ethical implementation.

From a strategic perspective, AI chatbots provide banks with a competitive advantage by improving customer retention and strengthening brand loyalty. Institutions that successfully integrate intelligent customer service technologies are likely to experience enhanced customer engagement and operational resilience. Moreover, chatbot-generated interaction data can be utilized for predictive analytics, enabling banks to identify customer needs, detect fraudulent activities, and develop personalized financial products. Overall, the discussion demonstrates that AI-powered chatbots possess significant potential to revolutionize banking customer service by enhancing efficiency, accessibility, and customer satisfaction. Nevertheless, successful implementation requires balancing technological innovation with human-centered approaches, ethical considerations, and regulatory compliance. Future developments in conversational AI, emotional intelligence, and explainable AI are expected to further improve the effectiveness and acceptance of chatbot technologies within the banking industry.

VI. CONCLUSION

AI-powered chatbots have emerged as powerful tools for enhancing customer service efficiency and digital transformation in the banking sector. Their ability to provide personalized, instant, and cost-effective services has significantly improved customer experiences and organizational productivity. However, challenges related to privacy, trust, security, and the handling of complex interactions continue to limit their complete replacement of human customer service representatives. The study concludes that the future of banking customer service lies in the effective integration of AI technologies with human expertise. A hybrid service ecosystem can enable financial institutions to maximize operational efficiency while maintaining customer trust and service quality. Therefore, banking organizations should adopt strategic approaches that emphasize both technological advancement and responsible AI governance. Future research may focus on integrating Generative AI and Large Language Models into banking chatbots to enhance conversational capabilities and contextual understanding. Studies may also investigate explainable AI mechanisms to improve transparency and customer trust in automated financial decision-making. Additionally, cross-cultural analyses can provide insights into variations in customer acceptance of AI technologies across different regions and demographic groups. Further research is required to examine ethical frameworks, emotional intelligence capabilities, and blockchain-based security mechanisms that can strengthen the reliability and effectiveness of AI-powered customer service systems in banking environments.

REFERENCES

- [1] Caldarini, G., Jaf, S., & McGarry, K. (2022). A literature survey of recent advances in chatbots and conversational agents. Artificial Intelligence Review, 55(8), 1–28.
- [2] Mashaabi, M., Alotaibi, A., Qudaih, H., Alnashwan, R., & Al-Khalifa, H. (2022). Natural language processing applications in customer service systems: A systematic review. International Journal of Information Systems, 18(3), 145–162.
- [3] Khosravi, H., Shafie, M. R., Hajiabadi, M., Raihan, A. S., & Ahmed, I. (2023). Chatbots and ChatGPT: A bibliometric analysis and systematic review. Information Systems Frontiers, 26(4), 1125–1142.
- [4] Kanaparthi, V. (2024). AI-based personalization and trust in digital financial services. Journal of Financial Technology Research, 11(2), 87–103.
- [5] Eustaquio-Jiménez, R., Durand-Azurza, M., Gamboa-Cruzado, J., et al. (2024). Chatbots for customer service in financial entities: A systematic review. Journal of Infrastructure Policy and Development, 8(16), 1–22.
- [6] Graham, G., Nisar, T. M., Prabhakar, G., Meriton, R., & Malik, S. (2025). Chatbots in customer service within banking and finance: Do chatbots herald the start of an AI revolution? Computers in Human Behavior, 165, 108570.
- [7] Karri, S. B., Gawali, S., Rayankula, S., & Vankadara, P. (2025). AI chatbots in banking: Transforming customer service and operational efficiency. Advances in Intelligent Systems and Technologies, 45(3), 221–235.
- [8] Davenport, T. H., & Ronanki, R. (2018). Artificial intelligence for the real world. Harvard Business Review, 96(1), 108–116.
- [9] Huang, M. H., & Rust, R. T. (2021). A strategic framework for artificial intelligence in marketing. Journal of the Academy of Marketing Science, 49(1), 30–50. <https://doi.org/10.1007/s11747-020-00749-9>
- [10] Dwivedi, Y. K., Hughes, L., Baabdullah, A. M., et al. (2023). So what if ChatGPT wrote it? Multidisciplinary perspectives on opportunities, challenges and implications of generative conversational AI. International Journal of Information Management, 71, 102642. <https://doi.org/10.1016/j.ijinfomgt.2023.102642>
- [11] Vrontis, D., Christofi, M., Pereira, V., et al. (2022). Artificial intelligence, robotics, advanced technologies and human resource management: A systematic review. The International Journal of Human Resource Management, 33(6), 1237–1266.
- [12] Ameen, N., Tarhini, A., Shah, M. H., & Madichie, N. O. (2021). Employees' behavioural intention to use AI-powered chatbots in customer services. Computers in Human Behavior Reports, 3, 100050.
- [13] Belanche, D., Casaló, L. V., Flavián, C., & Schepers, J. (2020). Service robot implementation: A theoretical framework and research agenda. Service Industries Journal, 40(3–4), 203–225.
- [14] Cheng, X., Fu, S., Sun, J., Bilgihan, A., & Okumus, F. (2022). An investigation on online reviews and customer engagement using AI. Journal of Business Research, 144, 290–302.
- [15] Gefen, D., Karahanna, E., & Straub, D. W. (2003). Trust and TAM in online shopping: An integrated model. MIS Quarterly, 27(1), 51–90.
- [16] Venkatesh, V., Morris, M. G., Davis, G. B., & Davis, F. D. (2003). User acceptance of information technology: Toward a unified view. MIS Quarterly, 27(3), 425–478.
- [17] Chatterjee, S., Rana, N. P., Dwivedi, Y. K., & Baabdullah, A. M. (2021). Understanding AI adoption in banking services. Technological Forecasting and Social Change, 168, 120783.
- [18] Kasilingam, D. (2020). Understanding the attitude and intention to use smartphone chatbots for shopping. Technology in Society, 62, 101280.
- [19] Adam, M., Wessel, M., & Benlian, A. (2021). AI-based chatbots in customer service and their effects on user compliance. Electronic Markets, 31(2), 427–445.
- [20] Pillai, R., Sivathanu, B., & Dwivedi, Y. K. (2024). Artificial intelligence adoption in financial services: A systematic review and future research agenda. International Journal of Information Management Data Insights, 4(1), 100240.
- [21] Loureiro, S. M. C., Guerreiro, J., & Tussyadiah, I. (2023). Artificial intelligence in customer services: Systematic literature review and future agenda. Journal of Business Research, 157, 113567.

10.22214/IJRASET

45.98

IMPACT FACTOR:
7.129

IMPACT FACTOR:
7.429

INTERNATIONAL JOURNAL FOR RESEARCH

IN APPLIED SCIENCE & ENGINEERING TECHNOLOGY

Call : 08813907089  (24*7 Support on Whatsapp)