I. INTRODUCTION

In the modern digital era, social media marketing has become a vital component of any brand's entire marketing plan. Businesses can immediately interact with customers, reach millions of people worldwide, and create long-lasting connections by using platforms like Instagram, Facebook, Twitter, and LinkedIn. Social media marketing matters because purposes beyond merely advertising goods and services: it helps in brand identity development, target market connection, and consumer engagement. By leveraging social media, businesses may enhance customer loyalty, increase recognition of their brand, and ultimately increase growth and sales in a market that is growing more competitive. E-marketing or digital marketing have various name for it.

This phrase emphasizes the use of websites and social media platforms to advertise goods, services, or brands. In order to interact with a target audience and further achieve business goals, it involves creating and distributing material, including posts, videos, and ads. In the linked world of today, social media marketing has grown to be a useful instrument for companies of all kinds. It develops relationships and trust by permitting informal interactions with customers in addition to improving brand visibility and awareness. The way organizations communicate with their clients in the digital age has been entirely transformed by social media marketing. It generates customised campaigns, raises awareness for the company, and interacts with target audiences directly through platforms which includes Facebook, Instagram, LinkedIn, and TikTok.

By leveraging features such as real-time communication, data-driven insights, and interactive content, businesses can forge stronger connections with their customers and achieve better market reach. The ability to analyze consumer behavior and deliver personalized experiences have made Social Media Marketing an indispensable tool for businesses of all sizes.

Social media marketing not only improves relationship but also gives small and medium-sized businesses a reasonable way of competing in international market places. It encourages trust, strengthens brand loyalty, and enables creative collaboration like influencer alliances and user-generated content initiatives. With emerging technologies like augmented reality and artificial intelligence, social media marketing is developing as companies adjust to the digital revolution, offering creative answers for long-term growth and client engagement. Because of this, it is an essential element of long-term success in a cutthroat corporate atmosphere.

II. LITERATURE REVIEW

In a 2019 paper on "The role of social media marketing in consumers behavior" has discussed that the growing number of social networking users is increasing day by day. In which, compared to 2014 users have increased by more than 1.9 billion equivalent to 75% increase in 5 years. It stated that it took 16 years to reach the first billion users according to the international telecommunication union, the second billion was only after 6 years and by 2019 the rate of new billion users was increasing at just 2.7 years.

The purpose of Citra Savitris' 2021 article, The Role of Social Media Promotion and Brand Image in Mobile Purchase Intention, was to investigate how social networking marketing and brand image could influence consumer intentions to purchase smartphones. This article highlights how the swift advancement of communication technology has created significant opportunities for telecom companies. The widespread use of mobile phones, equipped with various features that support e-commerce—such as the marketing of products and services via electronic platforms like computer networks, television, and radio—has largely contributed to this trend.

According to SAJID, S.I through a 2016 review paper, organizations in Bangladesh and other parts have earned an increase in customers through social media. Manufacturers including Microsoft, MTV Bangladesh have trusted social media as their top marketing strategies and hence they have started to invest more in promotional cost in social media marketing whereas in 2016 they were spending only 6% but anticipated to increase to 10% in the next season.

K Jamil says that his main study has been on the ways in which particular social media marketing initiatives affect buyer behavior, such as satisfaction, trust, and buy intentions. He has highlighted that well-executed marketing campaigns enhance customer loyalty by creating value and fostering strong brand identification. The study emphasizes that engaging content and interactive features are essential to influence decision-making and purchase behaviour.

The researcher has also used several statistical models to demonstrate the relationship between social media engagement and consumer intentions. It provides real world examples of brands successfully leveraging these platforms.

Nugzar Todua, has explained on healthcare, this study highlights how social media marketing can improve patient engagement and trust. By using social media to provide timely information and facilitate interactions, healthcare organizations foster better patient relationships and brand credibility. This has highly encouraged healthcare providers to integrate social media strategies for improved communication and awareness.

A 2024 analysis of social media marketing highlights its significant shift towards integrating e-commerce and enhancing brand engagement. Platforms such as TikTok and Instagram are increasingly used as shopping tools, allowing users to make purchases directly within the apps through features like TikTok Shop and Instagram Shopping. With nearly half of marketers planning to expand their social selling efforts, these platforms are becoming essential for businesses aiming to connect with digital consumers. Furthermore, artificial intelligence plays a key role in improving customer engagement by enabling tailored experiences and prompt interactions, driving deeper connections between brands and their audiences.

With a focus on Instagram, he has been able to look into how user engagement and self-brand connections are affected by social media advertising campaigns (SMMA) in the restaurant sector. It investigates how user involvement mediates the relationship between self-brand connections and SMMA, with trust and gender acting as moderator. Research using a sample of young consumers (18–24 years old) shows that SMMA have a favorable impact on self-brand connection and user engagement. The study enriches the literature on marketing in the hospitality industry and offers useful advice for restaurant companies looking to create effective SMMA.

Thus, it has brought attention to the clear link between strategic social media marketing and brand equity.

Rahmad Solling Hamid examined how social media affects millennial owners of businesses, paying particular consideration to reported creativity, trust, and entrepreneurial fulfillment. The study's PLS-SEM analysis of 385 respondents' data revealed that self-perceived originality and trust were significantly improved by the caliber of social media material and system performance. In addition, it showed that while system performance had no direct effect on satisfaction, social media marketing initiatives improved trust and satisfaction. The research highlights the necessity of improving social media tactics to boost millennial entrepreneurs' happiness, creativity, and credibility.

Santus Kumar Deb says that his study explores the use of online advertising strategies to enhance the performance of travel-related businesses in the new normal.

The primary findings show that social media marketing, perceived utility, and ease of use constitute significant factors impacting the adoption of digital marketing. A beneficial relationship between digital behaviors and visitor satisfaction has been shown by the support of seven out of nine hypotheses. The report provides distinctive insights into the evolving tourist industry and places a strong emphasis on empowering local communities and improving tourism performance through effective digital methods.

Social media has grown into a vital tool for businesses to communicate with clients directly, facilitating real-time communication, community development, and tailored marketing. Businesses may build deeper connections with their audience through employing an assortment of tactics, like influencer partnerships, specific advertisements, and interactive content, which will ultimately boost sales and brand loyalty.

Technological advancements, such as AI and augmented reality, are transforming the social media marketing landscape, enabling immersive and tailored campaigns. User-generated content and influencer collaborations enhance authenticity and help brands remain relatable in dynamic markets. However, businesses must address challenges like algorithm changes, privacy concerns, and the increasing demand for ethical transparency to maintain consumer trust.

The research also revealed challenges such as rapidly changing algorithms, privacy concerns, and the need for consistent content across platforms. Moving forward, brands must remain agile, ethically manage data, and adapt to emerging technologies to harness the full potential of social media marketing in an increasingly competitive digital landscape.
