I. INTRODUCTION

The year 1936 opened a memorable chapter in the history of Orissa. On the 1st April of that year, the divided Orissa was united and Orissa became a separate province. The far spreading orissan empire was divided into pieces during the British rule. In the year 1765, Lord Clive secured the eliwari right of Bengal, Bihar, Orissa. At that time Orissa meant Midnapur and some areas covering south of the river Subarnarekha. But the remaining parts of Orissa were under the control of Marathas. Finally in 1803, the Britishers defeated the Marathas and occupy Orissa. As a result the area beyond Subarnarekha river in the Midnapur area remained under Bengal presidency. Ganjam, Jaypore, Paralakhemundi and certain other parts of south Orissa were controlled from the fort St. George under Madras presidency. In the west areas located upstream of the river Mahanadi like Sambalpur, Raigarh of Chhattisgarh, Paddampur and certain other areas were controlled by the commissioner of central provinces. Singhbhum and some parts of Orissa remained with Bihar. There were Twenty-six Gadajat states located on the hilly areas in the North west and enjoyed the status of tributary states not under the direct rule of British. The Districts like Cuttack, Puri and Balasore were directly ruled by the British commissioner with its headquarters at Cuttack is known as Moghulbandi region. As a result, Orissa lost its previous glory came under the control of Bengal, Madras and central provinces. In order to unite all Oriya speaking tracts, a movement was launched. This was called Oriya movement with main objective to form a separate Orissa province. The growth of nationalism helped the Oriya movement to proceed in full swing.

The second cause was the establishment of printing presses, publication of Newspapers and Periodicals in the Nineteenth Century. In 1866, Utkal Dipika was published from Cuttack with Gourisankar Ray as its editor. The Names of a few other Newspaper are worth mentioning. Those were the Sambada Bahika, Bodha Daini with Fakir Mohan Senapati as editor, Sambalpur Hitaishini printed on Sudhal Press with Nilamani Vidya Ratna as editor and Utkal Hitaishini Samaja published with the patronage of Padmanava Narayan Deo of Paralakhemundi.

Another cause for the growth of Oriya Nationalism was the impact of some cultural and political organizations established at that time. The first such association was the mutual improvement society founded in 1859. Some other Prominent association of Cuttack were the Utkal Bhasa Uddipani Sabha, Cuttack club, Cuttack Reading Club and Orissa Graduate Association with Madhusudan Das as its Presidents. Similar associations were formed on other parts of Orissa like national society of Balasore & Hitobodhini Sabha of Ganjam. These associations provided a good platform to discuss their problem & made the people conscious of their land and language.

II. ROLE OF UTKAL SABHA

The Utkal Sabha, a most remarkable association, played a significant role in the growth of Oriya nationalism. It was started with an objective to organize political activities in the urban area of Orissa. The promotion of Oriya language and literature was another prime objective of Utkal Sabha. Many educationists and intellectuals attended this Utkal Sabha and discussed current political and social issues.
